

Painting in the World of Charles Burchfield

Learn to Paint in Watercolor with Pam Russell

A Watercolor Workshop for High School Students & Young Adults

2 Sessions July 9 & 11 12:00 – 2:00 pm

$30 fee includes all materials & supplies

Experience the life of American painter and visionary artist Charles Burchfield as you explore nature along the walking paths in the park. Along the way you can see Burchfield's home and examples of his artwork. Nature will become your inspiration for creating your own watercolor painting. Learn basic watercolor techniques and how to apply them to your own artwork.

Enjoy creating a finished watercolor painting ready for hanging!

No experience necessary.

Pam Russell is a recently retired high school art teacher. She is a graduate from the University of Cincinnati receiving a masters degree in art education. She began her teaching career in southern Ohio and spent her last 33 years as a high school art teacher and later department head at Iroquois Central in Elma, NY.

Pam enjoys painting in acrylics and watercolors. Although she has sold many works in the past, today she prefers to paint for family and certain charities. She shares her life with her husband Andy, a full-time artist himself. She and her husband have spent many years traveling and participating in art shows and festivals across the country, experiencing the art world firsthand.
